

well as social and economic wellbeing. In spite of the significant efforts undertaken by developing countries and some achievements in that regard, education and the empowerment