

well as for receiving states may be found through a constructive international dialogue on issues of migration and development. Equally important to achieve this aim is an effective management of migration processes grounded on balanced and coherent policies.

Russian migration legislation is constantly being improved on the principles of promotion and protection of human rights and freedoms of both Russian and foreign citizens residing in Russia.

One of the most important recent novelties in the Russian migration law is the introduction from the 1st of January 2015 of a new system of special documents - labour patents for foreign workers coming to Russia in a visa free regime. These patents to be
