Global Warming

The Earth's temperature is rising, and the climate is changing. This is due to the greenhouse effect, which is caused by the release of greenhouse gases into the atmosphere.

The greenhouse effect is a natural process that warms the Earth's surface. When the Sun's rays reach the Earth, some of the energy is reflected by clouds and some is absorbed by the ground and water. The ground and water then warm up and radiate the energy back outwards. Some of this energy is absorbed by greenhouse gases in the atmosphere, which then radiate the energy back towards the Earth's surface. This process is known as the greenhouse effect.

Together with the ongoing Conference of the Parties to the United Nations Convention on Climate Change, we mark a new beginning combat environmental threats that undermine community resilience and drive migration in vulnerable regions.

We lead and coordinate actively to improving national and international migration as part of the UN Migration Network. Indeed, the Migration Network offers a critical opportunity to strengthen and coordinate our work on migration.
