

3.0 While each large movement of refugees will differ in nature, the elements noted below, grounded in international law and practice, and adapted to the specific context, provide a framework for a comprehensive refugee response.

4.0 We envisage a comprehensive refugee response framework which would be applied to a specific large movement of refugees, including in protracted situations, and which would normally contain the following elements: Recommend adding reference to _____ .

5.1 ensure to the greatest extent possible, that measures are in place to identify refugees. (Those found not to be in need of protection as refugees may still require protection and support on other grounds); Those found not to be in need of protection as refugees may still require _____ support on other grounds;

5.3 meet essential needs of refugees, including providing _____ water, sanitation, food, nutrition, shelter, health care and psycho-social support

5.5 use the registration process to identify specific assistance needs and protection arrangements, where appropriate, including (but not exclusively) for refugees with special protection concerns, for unaccompanied children and children separated from their families, for child-headed and single-parent households, _____ with disabilities and older persons;

7.3 encourage refugees, at the outset of an emergency phase, to establish _____ supportive systems and networks involving refugees and host communities, _____ with a particular emphasis on the protection of women and children and other persons with specific needs;

8.2 seek to incorporate the comprehensive

11.6 support efforts to foster reconciliation and dialogue, particularly with refugee communities, and with the participation of women, and to ensure respect for the rule of law at the national and local levels;

11.8