

REDDMANEN

820 SECOND AVENUE

TEL: (212) 885-2690 • FAX: (212) 885-2691

E-MAIL: MISSION@GREECEUN.ORG

67TH Session of the Inter-Orthodox Commission

Sixth Report

Agendum Items

Report of the International Law Committee

on the Ecumenical Patriarchate's proposed legislation

Concerning the Ecumenical Patriarchate's proposed legislation

Statement

Ms. Elizabeth K. Harkness, Special Envoy

Legal Advisor, International Law Committee

Mr. Michael J. Redmanen, Esq.

NEW YORK

Friday, November 2, 2012

Mr Chairman.....

Concerning the question of liability, I would like to make a few observations. The Event of Disaster, as I believe it was defined in the Report of the Special Rapporteur, Mr. Vassilis Karamanlis, in his Executive Report, is a political concept which has not been clearly defined. It is not clear what is meant by "political". In his report, he provides a definition of political, which includes international community, has death or injury, and is caused by a bilateral, continental, regional or international alliance of binding and non-binding character. He is also taking into account the fact that the conflict is taking in its course, if further commitment is made, and full explanations for the conduct of the parties will be forwarded and, in this way, a clearer picture will be obtained. This will satisfy even clearer picture of the measures involved and the way they may be treated.

Mr Chairman.....

While fully endorsing the statement of the Rapporteur, I would like to add that we would like to stress the importance of the particular question of Article 12.

Mr Chairman.....

Article 12 refers to a "right" of States to take individual or joint measures to protect their populations against the effects of a disaster. It is based on the opinion of states, which the Special Rapporteur has expressed, that there is no duty of States and international organizations to do so. The formulation is, however, somewhat ambiguous. It is not clear whether the right is limited to the prevention of disasters, enunciated in the first sentence, or whether it applies to any State or an international organization, which has a responsibility to do so.

requested<sup>1</sup>. Nonetheless, no matter how convenient it might be to consider it sufficient to implant a word which would be in contrivance to the international custom that has not yet had enough time to offer such a right, it is not in accordance with the letter of the law.

Two arguments may be put forward to support this view. It is obvious that a State or an international organization may, at any time, propose its assistance to an affected State.<sup>2</sup> Hence there is no need to couch such offer in terms of a "right". This could easily be done if the commission could generally require the giving of such an offer, but this is not easy to establish in the present case. There is also the question of the duty of the affected State.<sup>3</sup> One might be tempted to establish a link between the "right" referred to in article 12 and that "duty" to seek assistance mentioned in article 19. This approach, however, would completely miss the point here, as the two provisions do not mention each other in any way.

For these reasons, we support the view expressed last year by some delegations, that the term "right" should be deleted from article 12. It should therefore be reformulated, focusing more on the circumstantial character of the offer rather than on the legal nature of the right.

As regards Dr. S. Avdeev's suggestion to substitute "will" for "shall" in those members of the ECOSOC which have expressed the view that the use of mandatory language in this regard, such as the word "shall", indicates the existence of an obligation to provide assistance, we note that this has been found not to be supported, taking account of the fact that it would benefit from an indicative, as opposed to a substantive, one which is now employed, of the types of assistance which can be given. This would give the assisting State more options within the framework outlined by article 13.

Mr. Chairman:

<sup>1</sup>For a summary of the position of States on this issue, see Urgent matters during the preparation of a general convention on the event of an emergency situation, A/C.6/66/SR.24, para. 37, p. 7.

<sup>2</sup>See Russian Federation, A/C.6/66/SR.24, para. 37, p. 7.

<sup>3</sup>See United Kingdom, A/C.6/66/SR.23, para. 45, p. 10; United States of America, A/C.6/66/SR.21, para. 69, p. 14.

I would like now to address a matter of a more general nature in relation to the future work of the International Law Commission.

The Special Rapporteur informed the Commission of his intention to spend most of his time working on the issue of disaster risk reduction, including the prevention and mitigation of disasters.<sup>4</sup> We will take this approach, as protection of persons and the environment should not be limited to the provision of relief assistance in case of emergency, but to prevent such disasters or mitigate their effects through appropriate infrastructure, international cooperation, early warning systems and contingency plans. This approach has added value in the context of recurrent harmful events, such as river floods.

In relation to the latter, we would like to stress the importance of the United Nations Economic Commission for Europe's Transboundary Fluvial Management Plan. Model Principles<sup>5</sup> adopted with commentaries<sup>6</sup> by the General Assembly of the United Nations Contracting Parties to the Helsinki Convention on the Protection and Use of Transboundary Watercourses and International Lakes, dated 2006 and are available online at <http://www.ece.org/scientific-commissions-and-expert-groups/water/transboundary-watercourses-and-international-lakes/universal-principles-of-fluvial-management>. It provides a useful precedent to be taken into account in the course of the future work of the Special Rapporteur and the International Law Commission in relation to this topic.

Thank you Mr. Chairman.

<sup>4</sup>See Report of the Special Rapporteur on the issue of disaster risk reduction, para. 90.

<sup>5</sup>See doc. ECE/MP.WAT/2006/4 available at :

<http://www.ece.org/scientific-commissions-and-expert-groups/water/transboundary-watercourses-and-international-lakes/universal-principles-of-fluvial-management>.