

Introduction

1. The Applicant is a former staff member of the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (“ICTR”). She served as a Library Clerk on a fixed-term appointment at the G4 level until her separation from the Organization on 30 June 2011.

2. On 6 June 2012, she filed an Application dated 25 May 2012 contesting the administrative decision to withhold her final emoluments and the delay by the Administration to submit her pension forms for a period of nine months even after she tendered her notice of separation from the ICTR on 1 June 2011.

3. On 21 June 2012, the Respondent filed a Reply refuting the receivability of the Application and concurrently filed a Motion for Leave to have Receivability considered as a Preliminary Issue on grounds that the Applicant had failed to submit a request for management evaluation of the contested decision.

Factual Background

4. The Applicant tendered her letter of resignation from the International Criminal Tribunal for Rwanda (ICTR) on 30 May 2011 and was accordingly separated from the Organization on 30 June 2011. It would appear from the record before the Tribunal that for an indeterminate amount of time until her separation from the Organization, the Applicant served in the ICTR Staff Association Executive Committee.

5. Upon the initiation of the Applicant’s check-out process on 7 June 2011, the then President of the ICTR Staff Association, Mr. Orono Orono, copied the Applicant on an email in which he indicated that in light of ongoing investigations into the finances of the ICTR Staff Association particularly with respect to former members of the ICTR Staff Association Executive Committee, he was unable to complete the Applicant’s check out procedures.

6. In protest, the Applicant responded to the email by Mr. Orono Orono of 7 June 2011 on the same day. Mr. Orono consequently informed the Applicant that only upon receiving authorization from the Office of Internal Oversight Services (OIOS) would he sign off on her check-out process.

7. On 9 June 2011, the Applicant wrote an email to Ms. Patricia O'Brien raising, inter alia, the issue of the investigation against the former Executive Committee of the ICTR Staff Association. This email was copied to Mr. Orono Orono amongst others. On the same date, Mr. Orono Orono responded and expressed hope that OIOS would soon issue a report of their findings.

8. On 9 June 2011, Ms. Sarah Kilemi, Chief of the Division of Administrative Support Services ("DASS") wrote in an email stating that as far as the Administration was concerned, she had already approved the Applicant's separation to enable her to take up a new assignment.

9. The Applicant then embarked on varied email correspondence to various officials at the ICTR on the subject of her stalled check out process on diverse dates between 9 June 2011 and 16 March 2012, resting with her email to the then Registrar of the ICTR, Mr. Adama Dieng on 16 March 2012.

10. Mr. Dieng responded to the Applicant vide an email dated 16 March 2012 directing her to contact the ICTR Chief of Finance, Mr. Robert Foort, whom Mr. Dieng indicated would effect payments of the Applicant's entitlements without prejudice to the outcome of the OIOS investigation into the finances of the ICTR Staff Association.

11. The Applicant and Mr. Foort exchanged emails on the subject of the processing of her final entitlements resting with Mr. Foort's email dated 22 March 2012 in which he assured the Applicant that her case was being handled as a matter of priority and that he would revert to her as soon as payment was ready to be made.

12. In the meantime, on 19 March 2012, the Applicant received a request by an OIOS investigator, Ms. Deborah Izevbizua, to provide supporting documentation in respect of funds of the ICTR Staff Association that the Applicant had allegedly spent. This email communication referenced an earlier irregular and an abuse of the Administration's discretionary powers and a breach

35. In deliberately failing to submit a request for management evaluation, the Applicant has authored the fate of this Application herself.

Whether this Application is an abuse of court process requiring an order for costs against the Applicant

36. The Tribunal deems it necessary to conduct an inquiry into whether the Applicant has abused its process by filing this Application. Article 10.6 of the Statute of the Dispute Tribunal provides that upon a determination that a party before it has abused its process and proceedings, the Tribunal may award costs against that party.

37. In the words of Lord Diplock of the English Court of Appeal in Hunter v. Chief Constable of the West Midlands Police [1982] AC 529, the power of a Court to strike out applications which constitute an abuse of its process is imperative in order for the Court:

To prevent misuse of its procedure in a way which, although not inconsistent with the literal application of its procedural rules, would nevertheless be manifestly unfair to a party to litigation before it, or would otherwise bring the administration of justice into disrepute among right-thinking people.

38. In the present instance, the Tribunal observes that the Applicant filed this Application in defiant breach of the Statute and Rules of Procedure of the Tribunal. Not only was the Application filed almost a year after the date of the contested decision but the Applicant has asserted that she intentionally failed to submit a request for management evaluation. In that regard, the Applicant has pleaded, not that she was unaware of the requirement to submit a request for management evaluation in respect of her application, where awareness or otherwise of this obligation is not a mitigating factor, but that she distrusts the ability of the Management Evaluation Unit (MEU) to conduct the evaluation process fairly and impartially. In her own words:

...MEU has failed in totality in many cases to correct an improper decision rendered by UNICTR management and to provide tolerable remedies by not been[sic] keen enough in analyzing the submitted supporting documentation presented before them and has been fanatical in favoring the decisions of UNICTR management.

39. The Applicant accordingly filed before the Tribunal exchanges between MEU and parties not before the Tribunal in an unrelated matter as support for her contention that the integrity of the MEU has been compromised. The Applicant has further submitted in so far as she considers that the management evaluation process is an impediment to justice that the Tribunal should overlook her failure to submit a request for management evaluation in the interests of safeguarding its own independence and in keeping with the principle of separation of powers and has referred the Tribunal to its Judgment in Igbinedion UNDT/2011/110.

40. It behoves any applicant, present or in the future, who approaches the Tribunal to be cognizant of the fact that proceedings before the Tribunal are not the proper forum to canvass issues of what the law should be vis-à-vis what it actually is. The management evaluation process is not on trial before this Tribunal. In refusing to request a management evaluation of the contested decision, the Applicant has essentially expressed contempt for the applicable law and procedures necessary to access the Tribunal. Notwithstanding the Applicant's vehement protestations against the applicability of the requirement to submit a request for management evaluation to her case, the reasons adduced for her failure to do so are misconceived and completely unacceptable in light of the express provisions in the Statute of the Dispute Tribunal and the combined jurisprudence of both the Dispute and Appeals Tribunal. The blatant and utter disregard for the procedural requirements shown by the Applicant in this case can only speak to her underlying motive in filing this Application.

41. In Golden International Navigation SA v. Zeba Maritime Company Limited [2008] JOL 21330 (C), the High Court of South Africa found that an action may be held to be vexatious if it is "obviously unsustainable, or frivolous, improper, instituted without sufficient ground, to serve solely as an annoyance to the defendant.”

42. Notwithstanding that she considered herself beyond the ambit of requisite procedural requirements, the Applicant still sought the following as remedies: grant of a ‘disturbance allowance’[sic] for the alleged nine-month period in which her final emoluments were withheld, the payment of compensation equivalent to two years’ net base salary on the assumption that her entitlements as withheld would have attracted a handsome interest rate if they had been deposited into a bank on the day she was checked out from the Organization and finally the payment of compensation equivalent to two years’ net base salary for moral and psychological damage wrought upon her by the contested decision.

43. Within the particular confines of this case and with reference to the totality of the submissions filed by the Applicant in this matter, the Tribunal is not persuaded that the Applicant filed the present Application for any reason other than to vex the Respondent. The Tribunal accordingly finds that the Applicant has abused its proceedings and that costs should be awarded against her pursuant to article 10.6 of the Statute of the Tribunal.

44. Whereas the right to access to justice is sacrosanct and is treated as such by this Tribunal, the Tribunal will nevertheless not hesitate to punish the misuse of its procedures by any party. The conduct of proceedings before the Tribunal considerably taxes both its resources and those of parties appearing before it. Where the Tribunal determines that any applications beferably tax

UNDT/2012/026 that where it encounters a glaring abuse of its process, the offending litigant must pay an award of costs to balance the scales of justice.

Conclusion

46. This Application is vexatious and frivolous. It is not receivable and is accordingly dismissed in its entirety. For the abuse of process of the Tribunal, the Applicant is ordered to pay USD600.
