

We can and must write it together.

ITU — the UN agency for digital technologies — is with you every step of the way.

We are proud co-organizers of the LLDC3 Connectivity Track, together with OHRLLS.

And as we look ahead to Gaborone in December, I call on this community to redouble efforts in three key areas:

1. Bold new partnerships with a focus on meaningful connectivity and robust digital infrastructure that works for LLDCs.
2. Local capacity for innovation and entrepreneurship with a focus on value creation.
3. Digital skill skill-building – especially targeting vulnerable populations including women and girls.

By pooling our expertise and resources in these three areas, we can leverage this once-in-a-decade opportunity to deliver universal, meaningful connectivity and sustainable digital transformation to every landlocked developing country – no exceptions.
