

Key points emerging from the Informal Interactive Dialogue between the PBC Chairs' Group, Countries on the Agenda and the members of the Security Council

26 April 2013

1. The scope of the PBC's advisory role to the Council (What can the Council expect from the PBC?)

- Š Post-conflict settings (UN mission settings):
 - Advice on and monitor progress in priority areas (e.g. state-building, institution-building, economic opportunities, women's and youth empowerment...etc.) and emerging needs/priorities;
 - Identify potential risks to and gaps in the peacebuilding process and help manage crises in agenda countries;
 - Serve as a bridging link to the Government of the country concerned;
 - Support senior UN leadership in the implementation of mandated peacebuilding-related tasks and activities;
 - Monitor the level of attention/commitment from national, regional and international actors;
 - Promote coherence among and alignment of UN and non-UN policies, activities and objectives.

- Š Transition of UN missions in countries on the agenda:
 - Focus national and international attention on key priority areas (political, socio-economic) which would help facilitate

2. Engagement from the Security Council (What can the PBC expect from the Security Council?)
