

Rgcegdwknfkpi "Eq o o kuukqp"
Y qtmkpi " I tqwr"qp"Nguuqpu"Ngctpgf

"

Nqeci" I qxgtpcpeg"cp f"Fgegpytcnk | cvkqp"kp"Rquv/ Y ct"Eqpvgzvu" 35"Fgeg o dgt"4229"

Kpvtqfwekqp

It is readily recognized that rebuilding institutions of governance is a high priority in post-conflict contexts. Indeed, external actors tend to privilege support to central government institutions as part of a larger peacebuilding and state building agenda. Yet in many post conflict contexts it is equally important to pay early attention to local governance because that is often the point of entry for people in a society to interact with the state and receive services and support from the state. Decentralization of governance may also facilitate greater participation of communities, inc central government's influence in areas of the country may be weak.

§" Gpuwtkpi"vjcv"gzvgtpcmm{"kpkvkcvgf"rtqitc ou"qh" fgegvtcnk|cvkqp"dg"ectghwnn{"fgukipgf"cpf"vcmg"kpq"ceeqwpv"jkuvqtken"cpf"ewwvwtcn"kuwgu"cu"ygnn"cu"rdnke"rgtegrvkqpu"qh"yjq"qypu"cpf"ngcfu"vjg"ghhqtvu0 In some settings, there may be a poor culture of participation and experience with power-sharing and representational empowerment. Furthermore, taking into account existing institutions and traditional community-based structures in a situation while women, are represented. Adequate provision of basic services by both the central and local government, with a suitable distribution of responsibilities to each, is important to build confidence among the local populations as well as within the internationa

Cppgz

The four main types of decentralizati