

Statement by H.E. Mr. Kim Chang Guk, Ambassador and Deputy Permanent Representative of the Democratic People's Republic of Korea to the United are confined only to a few countries whereas the majority of developing countries still remain at the margin of the public information field.

It is, therefore, imperative for the United Nations to provide the developing countries with more opportunities for their participation in the activities of the international public information and communications.

Meanwhile, the developing countries should enhance their own information capacity and