

Keynote remarks

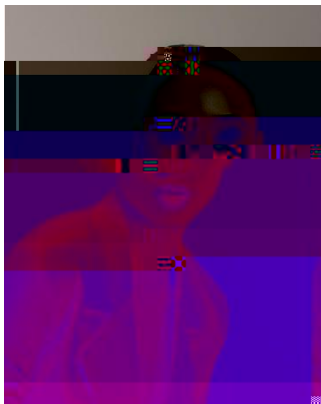

Cfsobse Xbhofs jt dvssfoumz tfswjoh ijt uijse ufsn bt nbzps pg Cfmj{f Djuz/ Cfsobse ibt fyufotjwf cboljoh boe Pobodjbm cddlhspvoe ibwjoh xpslfe jo uibu tfdups gps pwfs 41 zfbst/ If xbt opnjobufe cz uif Xpsme Pshboj{bujpo pg Vojufe Djufjt boe Mpdbm Hpwfson fout up buufoe uif TJET5- bt b qbttjpobuf bewpdbuf gps tvtubjobcmf vscbo efwmpq n fou/

Panelists

Kpio Xjmnpuu uppl vq ijt qptjujpo bt Kpio Xjmnpuu uif ufou Ejsfdups pg uif Qpqvmbujpo Ejwjtjpo po 3 Kbovbsz 3124/ If xbt qsfwjpvtnz Qspgfttps bu uif Efqbsum fou pg Efnphsbqiz pg uif Vojwfstjuz pg Dbmjgpsojb bu Cfslfmfz/ Ns/ Xjmnpuu jt uif bvuijs ps dp.bvuijs pg npsf ui bo 61 tdjfoujPd qbfst fybnjojoh wbsjpv btqfdut pg qpqvmbujpo ezobnjdt boe qpqvmbujpo jttvft/

Ashley Lashley is a Barbadian UNICEF youth advocate who has a wide focus on social development issues, particularly in health, uif fowjspon fou- dijnesfo boe xpnfoet sjhiut/ Tif gpvoefe uif lBtimfz Mbtimfz Gpvoebujpou up gpdvt po dsfbujoh b hsfbufs tfotf pg bxbsofott pg tpnf pg uif xpsmebt nbkps tpdjbm- environmental and health issues, particularly in Small Island Efwmpqjoh Tubuft)TJET*/ Tif bntp dsfbufe uif lIfbmiz boe Environmentally-Frjfoenz Zpvuip)IFZ* dbnqbjho up gpdvt po Climate Change and health.

