

Terrorist groups were also able to expand their activities, particularly in earlier days, by taking advantage of the security gaps left the governments that were too busy trying to contain pandemic. For example, to rally popular support, Al Qaeda declared that they would not engage in any terrorist activities, and instead would