

likely to be unemployed than men before the current crisis. Unemployment rates have to be higher for women than for men. In these regions, where women usually face stronger barriers to labour market entry and have more difficulty finding work, the unemployment rate has